He decides to take his family along with him to his village where he wants to teach the villagers something completely different. Mumbai-based happy-go-lucky civil engineer Manav (Akshay Kumar) leads a purpose-driven life of service, where his motto is "Seek the truth". He is a maverick who believes in serving people and has a soft spot for the underdog. Manav and his wife (Amrita Rao) live with their two children. After his wife passes away, Manav decides to take his family along with him to his village where he wants to teach the villagers something completely different. He expects that they will be happy living in the small village where they will find peace and quietness. But what he finds there is entirely different than what he has ever imagined. Rajnagar is a small village in state of Uttarakhand. The villagers there are good-natured, but they still do not know anything about the world outside. They don't even hear about news on TV. Since they live in this untouched nature, Manav starts teaching them new things to improve their lives and also start cutting off their ignorance of today's world. The villagers are very happy with this idea and start learning many things that had never been taught to them earlier. In this process, Manav's family also fits in very well there. But slowly the villagers start taking advantage of Manav's good nature and they start cheating him while doing business with him. They realize that there is more money to be made outside the village and they don't need this kind of help anymore. When Manav finds out about this cunningness, he decides that he will teach them a lesson. He devises a plan to teach them a lesson and bring them back to their senses.
