But if you thought that meant the 2017 ThinkPad P1 was coming to market next year, think again. New images of the ThinkPad P1 have been uploaded to Lenovo's official website, and they reveal a lot about the new ThinkPad that will be available to buy in April. The ThinkPad P1 will be a 14-inch machine that has been designed to deliver the "thinnest, lightest and most powerful ThinkPad in the business". Lenovo claims the ThinkPad P1 will offer "the best price-to-performance ratio in the ThinkPad line with NVIDIA's GeForce 940MX GPU". It will also be "the only PC to feature TPM 2.0 chip security," and has been designed to "mitigate cyber threats that could cause damage to your personal data". In the same image, Lenovo has revealed the ThinkPad P1 has a "unique hidden sliding latch that moves into place to protect your ThinkPad when it is in transit". It also has a "hidden fingerprint sensor, now more secure than the display." Lenovo has also revealed the P1 will have a 7th generation Intel Core processor inside, although exactly which processor is yet to be revealed. The ThinkPad P1 will be available to buy in April, starting at $999. The ThinkPad P1 will be available to buy in April Read next: Lenovo ThinkPad P1, UK and EU
