Q: SQL Server: conditional left join with a table variable I have a schema that looks like the following: TableA ID Other_ID Status TableB ID Other_ID SomeOther_ID I need to build a query that will select rows from TableA that match up with other records in TableB. However, I also need to left join these records only if the Status is 'TODO' and the SomeOther_ID is null (I don't care if there are other records with the Other_ID in TableA). Currently I'm building it with an if statement, and it's a bit ugly looking: if(some_value = 'TODO') begin select * from TableA left join TableB on TableA.ID = TableB.ID and TableB.SomeOther_ID is null end else begin select * from TableA left join TableB on TableA.ID = TableB.ID and TableB.SomeOther_ID = @parameter end The problem with this is that it's easy to confuse the two joins. I think it would be better to build it with a table variable that contains only the necessary information, but I don't know if this is possible. Any ideas would be appreciated! A: You can use OUTER APPLY and IS NULL: SELECT * FROM TableA A OUTER APPLY (SELECT TOP 1 *
