As known, there exist ceramic products based on silicon nitride and silicon carbide, which are particularly suitable for applications such as electronic components. In the prior art, silicon nitride or silicon carbide is obtained by chemical vapor deposition (CVD) or by plasma sintering, but both processes involve considerable difficulties in the preparation of the desired composite material and are not cost effective. Silicon carbide is produced by means of a so-called "carbothermal process" by combining a mixture of carbon and a silicon-containing material in an amount substantially equal to or
