I have a server with 2 identical servers, one where MySQL is installed and one where it is not installed. In the first server everything works perfectly, while in the second one I get the error message: Access denied for user 'user'@'%' to database'mydb' The strange thing is that I never had the problem in any of my previous MySQL installations. The default username and password are the same on both servers. I tried to use the absolute path in the Error log file. I tried to remove any security configurations, and I tried to change the password. In all cases I get the same message. What I tried: Change user Change user/password Change server When I use the absolute path in the Error log file I get the message: ERROR 1045 (28000): Access denied for user 'user'@'172.16.1.3' (using password: YES) Anyone knows how to fix this problem? EDIT: I tried to change the user and password using the MySQL console but it did not work. I'm using the following syntax: use ; grant all privileges on .* to 'user'@'%' identified by 'password'; A: I managed to fix the problem. The password was case sensitive, and there was a space between user and the password (which was set in the "Configure database" form, not the "General settings
