And i'm always wanting to be a little bit better, a little bit smarter.... A: Using a regex replace on each line would work fine. The following will fix the file. \$url = \$config->url; \$matches = []; \$url = preg_replace('/[\t]"/, "", \$url); if (preg_match('/:/(.+)\$/i', \$url, \$matches)) { \$domain = \$matches[1]; \$port = \$matches[2]; } //Now this will replace all the newlines and tabs \$url = preg_replace('/[\t]"/, "", \$url); $fileContent = file_get_contents($url); $lines = explode(" ", $fileContent); foreach ($lines as $line) { $line = str_replace("\t", "", $line); $lines[$line] = preg_replace('/(.+)\$/', "$domain ", $line); } file_put_contents($url, implode(" ",

You could use `file_get_contents` to download the file, and then you would have a ready-to-use string of it. All you would need to do then is explode it based on newlines, and run the regex replace to fix it up.
