Inheritance query I have a question about inheritance. I would like to ask you, for the inheritance of a child class, which method should be called (constructor or destructor)? And which parameters should be passed for each? A: It would depend on the language in which you are coding. The child class should have the same constructor as the parent, but should not be calling the parent's destructor. In the child class, you would define a constructor, but would not call the parent's constructor, in order to provide a standard implementation of the parent. A: Lets say you have the following code //Base class class Base { public: Base() { std::cout
