The aim of the present work is to characterize a fine earthy sand from a heavy oil contaminated area in Northern Italy by electron microscopy, X-ray diffraction, X-ray fluorescence spectrometry, and laboratory high temperature/high pressure (HT-HP) leaching test. The presence of metal contaminants, such as Ni, Co, and Fe, is demonstrated by X-ray spectrometry. Scanning electron microscopy observations show that the fine sand is composed of particles with a size 2d92ce491b
